Areas of expertise

Tom provides advice to clients on the strategic positioning of development projects to meet decision makers' objectives and secure planning consent. He has a comprehensive knowledge of the economic and demographic assessment of sites and development projects, a track record of anticipating and influencing public policy, and practical hands on experience of developing and delivering major regeneration projects.

He uses these skills to input to the masterplanning of major sites and new settlements, the production of planning application documents and scheme advocacy, inputs to site representations and presentation of clients' cases at EIPs, and negotiation on and planning for delivery of social infrastructure and delivering community benefits. He has a detailed knowledge of how the public sector operates, including local and community governance, planning and financing social infrastructure, including schools, and economic development and employment training programmes.
