Areas of expertise

A chartered town planner (MRTPI) with over five years' experience working in the private sector, Ewan has worked across a variety of planning disciplines including the residential, mixed-use and infrastructure (water and utilities) sectors.

Most recently, his focus has been the delivery of planning permissions for large major development schemes, often on complex, urban brownfield sites in Outer London boroughs.

In addition, Ewan has experience in traditional house builder-style developments across the South-East of England.

Key experience

Ewan has been involved in the preparation and submission of numerous large scale, major planning applications. He has gained experience in all stages of the planning process from site promotion to the preparation of planning application material and post-decision delivery, which is all supported by a sound and ever-growing planning knowledge and commercial awareness.

Ewan is well versed in the delivery of written technical advice on a variety of planning matters, including the undertaking of planning appraisals to help to establish planning risks and identify development opportunities, alongside other planning considerations for prospective sites.

Other experience includes calculating Community Infrastructure Levy (CIL) liability and Section 106 Obligations. Ewan also has some experience supporting Planning Appeals and Inquiries.
