Areas of expertise

Aleksandra joined Quod in September 2021 and has gained considerable experience working across the private and public sector since. Her educational background includes an Urban Planning, Design and Management BSc (University College London) and Urban Design MRes (University College London).

Aleksandra has experience working on a range projects including business case writing and assurance and applications for Government funding. She regularly supports the team on economic modelling for large infrastructure projects and mixed-use development in London. Her role regularly involves policy review and evaluation, supporting writing and assuring business cases, socio-economic impact assessment and population and labour modelling. She has experience working on high-risk projects, which require comprehensive risk management strategies. Her skillset includes spatial and statistical data analysis, working with a wide range of data (economic, environmental and demographic) to understand the local context of development and to optimise projects against strategic goals.
